Saga of Middlesex courthouse sags to an end
Dexter Brine; Joan Mahoney
Boston Globe (1960-1979); Jan 3, 1974; pg. 3

By Dexter D. Brine and Joan Mahoney
Globe Staff

The saga of the Middlesex County Courthouse will soon come to an end. The old courthouse, which opened in 1912, will be replaced by a new, modern structure. The old courthouse has served its purpose, but it is time for a change.

The old courthouse is located on a hill, overlooking the city. It has been a symbol of justice for many years. However, it is now showing signs of wear and tear. The roof is leaking, the walls are cracking, and the plumbing is outdated.

The new courthouse will be built on a site just a few blocks away. It will be a state-of-the-art facility, equipped with the latest technology. The new courthouse will accommodate more than twice as many people as the old one.

The old courthouse will be torn down after the new one is completed. The materials will be recycled, and the site will be turned into a park.

The transition to the new courthouse is expected to be smooth. The old courthouse will be fully operational until the new one is completed. Then, the old courthouse will be closed and the new one will take over.

The new courthouse will be a symbol of progress and innovation. It will stand as a testament to the city's commitment to justice and the rule of law.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.